

The story behind: My life on the streets of Novi Sad

...One day in October 2016...

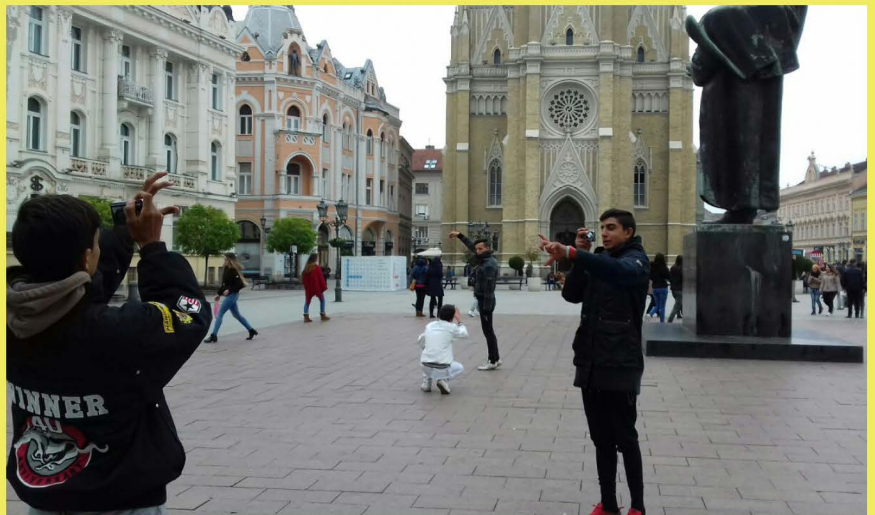

Step I

We gathered and made a plan, we discussed all the ideas and suggestions.

Step II

Everyone tried out different ideas and found out the best angle and the most creative solution to realize them.

Step III

At the end, we got great results like this one.

The story behind: My life on the streets of Novi Sad

After we had workshops about photography, the purpose of it, how it can be used as a tool to send a message and a great way to portray beauty, happiness, excitement, sadness and other impactful emotions, our little photographers used what they learnt in best ways and provided us with beautiful photos.

And finally, the day all of us have eagerly awaited arrived: the exhibition.

After having this wonderful journey with these great children, after we have learnt a lot with them through our workshops and our practical field work, we were so happy to present a collection of their little pieces of art, that, combined, formed one great piece of art.

It showed how much they learnt about photography, how their talent evolved and presented their everyday life in a different light, through different lenses, without filters or anyone's judgment, prejudices, or stereotypes.

We were so happy and grateful that so many dear guests showed up and shared joy, interests, opinions, words of support, smiles and that they couldn't hide their feelings of awe and admiration on their faces.

After the opening we could relax a bit and enjoy ourselves a little more with our 'people of the hour'.

Pride and smiles on their faces, excitement while they were looking for their own photographs, made all the effort and hard work worthwhile.

The best part was afterwards, when they asked when we are going to do something like this again.
